Kadmon's ROCK Inhibitor Platform in Fibrosis

Recent studies conducted by Kadmon and others have shown that ROCK signaling plays a key role in the development of pulmonary fibrosis, or scarring of the lungs that can lead to organ failure and death. Preclinical research by Kadmon has demonstrated that ROCK inhibition blocks multiple biochemical and biomechanical signals required for IPF disease progression. Kadmon has a portfolio of ROCK inhibitors in preclinical discovery for the treatment of fibrotic diseases. Kadmon is conducting a Phase 2 clinical trial in IPF.
